

Christoph Kesting named the new CEO of NextPhase Moving & Downsizing Solutions

VANCOUVER, British Columbia – NextPhase Moving & Downsizing Solutions' founder and CEO, Scott Morrison, is retiring after operating NextPhase for fifteen years in Metro Vancouver. Christoph Kesting takes over as owner and CEO effective October 6, 2023.

Christoph has an impressive track record of entrepreneurship, supporting the housing industry and being committed to client service and excellence throughout his career. Christoph worked closely with Scott over the transition period to understand the business. "As soon as I met Christoph, I couldn't image anyone else running the company but him," said Scott Morrison. "Christoph's insight into a client's needs and fresh new approach will be beneficial as NextPhase continues to grow throughout Metro Vancouver."

Christoph is passionate about bringing ease to people are encountering complexity. Christoph has dedicated his life to supporting, counselling and shepherding his clients through significant transitions. As a rehab therapist for more than a decade, he was entrusted with guiding families through the journeys they must inevitably navigate.

Christoph gained valuable experience in managing moves through his experience as an owner-operator of a housing company that built boutique shipping container homes. Christoph moved to Vancouver in 2015 to work for one of Vancouver's most prestigious builders. Christoph's love of home drew him again into managing the operations of Westcoast Modular, a BC manufacturer of accessible housing options. He joined NextPhase in January 2023, as VP of Operations.

"I'm honoured and excited to own NextPhase and to lead the company's growth and market expansion opportunities," said Mr. Kesting. "I've admired NextPhase's commitment and compassion for helping seniors transition to their "NextPhase" of life, and providing peace of mind, confidence and comfort during the stressful time of a move. This business is a perfect fit with my lifelong experiences and passion".

About NextPhase Moving & Downsizing Solutions

NextPhase is a one-stop moving and downsizing company that ensures every detail of a move is addressed. Our goal is to make every move simple and stress-free. Each move is tailored to a client's needs and requirements. No job is too big or small. We serve all of Vancouver, the Sunshine Coast, Vancouver Island and other regions in British Columbia. With over fifteen years of experience, customers love our systematic and calm approach when managing a move.

For more information, reach out to Christoph Kesting, the new director and CEO.
(604) 209-4241 Christoph.NextPhase@gmail.com or visit www.NextPhaseMoves.com